A NIGHT TO REMEMBER:

Just before going in to the prom dance at PineStone on Saturday

Show us the plans: Minden council tells Woodland Ranch it's time to put development plans in writing

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Minden councillors are threatening to crack down on extensive logging at Woodland Ranch unless owners of the property deliver long-awaited plans for their development proposal.

The time for talk about "pie in the sky" concepts is over, said councillor Daryl Moore, chair of the municipality's Planning Advisory Committee.

The committee — including all council members — called one of the three partners who bought Woodland Ranch onto the carpet at a special meeting Tuesday night and told him to present formal plans soon or face possible logging sanctions.

Greg Darroch, president of the Ontario numbered company that owns the 4,800-acre property, flew in for the meeting from his home in Vernon, B.C. and arrived straight from Toronto's airport.

"We've really seen nothing that signifies a proposal and that's what we want," Moore told Darroch. "In the meantime, you've been stripping away the forest in contravention of the county tree-cutting bylaw... Unless there's a proposal, we may have to be taking steps to stop the other stuff."

Since buying Woodland Ranch last September, Darroch, Donovan Palmer and an unidentified partner have outlined only general ideas for turning the property into a combined recreation resort and dude ranch for up to 3,000 families.

They haven't submitted a formal planning proposal to any of the three municipalities whose borders the property straddles

HHSS council endorses on-site sexual health clinic

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Going into a drug store to buy a box of condoms is so embarrassing for many teenagers they'd rather take a risk than be protected.

But what about when you live in Haliburton or Minden and the cashier used to be your babysitter or the pharmacist is your neighbour or your mom works with the woman peering over your shoulder in line?

For teens who have already made the decision to have sex, living in a small town can make it even more difficult to make the right choice to prevent unwanted pregnancies and protect against sexually transmitted diseases.

However, if the school council at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School gets its way, teens will have easier, more private access to birth control and be better equipped to make informed choices about premarital sex.

Walkers log 3,600 kilometres

THE SCENERY might not have changed much, but at least it was warm and dry for the 30 or so people who took part in the Heart and Stroke Foundation's morning walk program at the high school. Volunteer co-ordinators Kelly and Jacqueline Metcalf says participants in the free exercise program logged a total of 2,300 miles, or 3,600 kilometres in this school year. The early morning walking club has disbanded until October and they would like to thank the friendly high school staff whom they met along the way through the hallways for their support and encouragement.

Parents involved with CHACE should plan to attend the annual general meeting on Tuesday, June 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Haliburton Resource Centre.

Fly free - don't forget that young people between the ages of eight and 17 who haven't flown before are invited to the Stanhope Airport this weekend for the Young Eagles program. Local pilots are donating their time and their planes to take young people for a flight over the Highlands. There's no cost to participants, but their parents or official guardians must be present to sign the registration form. Just drop by the airport Saturday or Sunday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Wilberforce and other spots in Haliburton County will be featured in a new photography exhibit in Toronto from June 1 to 14. The Elevator Photo Gallery, 9 Davies Ave., 5th floor (Queen and Broadview) is displaying My Idea of North, photographs by Paul Sanderson. Sanderson's family roots are in Wilberforce, where he often returns as a cottager. A few years ago, the Rails' End Gallery had an exhibit of his evocative, wonderfully composed landscape photographs.

Sanderson will be at the gallery from 1 to 5 p.m. on June 5 and 6.

Celebrate Clean Air Day Canada on June 2 by getting involved with such things as walking, cycling and roller-blading. That way, says Go for Green, a national organization encouraging physical fitness and environmental health, you will also cut down on your contributions to the planet's air pollution and climate problems.

The Mental Health Law Education Project is hosting two information sessions to clear up some misconceptions about legal issues. The first is in Oshawa on Wednesday, June 9 at the CAW Hall, 1425 Phillip Murray Ave., from 1 to 5 p.m.. The second is at the Rock Haven Motel, 1875 Lansdowne St. West, on Thursday, June 10 from 1 to 5 p.m.. The sessions are being co-ordinated by the district health council and more information is available by calling 1-8000-833-7543.

The Canadian Canoe Museum and Peterborough Green-Up are launching the Great Canadian Canoe-a-thon to raise money to support their work promoting and protecting the natural environment. It takes Saturday, June 26, starting at Beavermead Park in Peterborough. Paddlers who collect pledges can then choose either the 15 km or five km route. For every $25 in pledges, participants earn a chance to win a new fibreglass canoe. Meanwhile, a new show at the Peterborough museum opens June 17. The 3,000 sq.ft. fur trade exhibit features an original 1876 Hudson's Bay Company trading post and recreated voyageur encampment. Other exhibits have been expanded, including one on Peterborough's canoe-building heritage. For more information, call Brittany Cadence, 705-748-9153.

Problem bears:

■ Groups which successfully fought against spring bear hunt now provide kit for dealing with nuisance bears

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Staff Reporter

Northerners now have a couple of choices this season if they encounter a problem bear, thanks in part to nuisance bear kits being circulated to various municipalities throughout cottage country.

The Schad Foundation and the International Fund for Animal Welfare have pooled resources, investing $200,000 in programs that will reduce the occurrence of bears entering populated areas.

Any municipality with an established bear problem is eligible to apply for the kits or other preventative tools, such as fencing or "bearproof" mechanisms for dumpsters.

IFAW's Rob Sinclair said cottage and resident associations and camp owners are also welcome to inquire.

"It's crucial that you ensure that people have a range of options," said Sinclair. "Often some people believe you can only get rid of a bear problem by killing it."

When used properly, items in the bear kit, including loud pyrotechnic devices, aim to reestablish the pecking order that has diminished over the years. Loud rounds can be fired at the bear which will temporarily deafen the animal, causing the animal to return to its natural habitat.

Dave Cotter, Schad's program coordinator, said bears have largely lost their fear of humans. "We have to prove to the bears that human are higher in the pecking order than they are."

While the kits do contain lethal rounds that could destroy a nuisance bear, Sinclair stresses this should only be a last resort.

Pepper spray and rubber bullets should be exhausted first as control measures, but prevention methods are still integral.

"If a bear is hanging around," says Bart Hilhorst, Ministry of Natural Resources technician, "it's hanging around for a reason."

Hilhorst said he's already answered 20 calls this season reporting problem bears and three traps have been set by the MNR.

Hilhorst warns people driving soft top vehicles against storing their garbage inside their cars.

"Last year a guy had one of those soft top Suzuki jeeps," Hilhorst said, "and there goes his top. The bear can sniff it (garbage) out."

While it is legal to shoot a bear in defense of you or your property, Hilhorst urges people to call the MNR first.

For political reasons, Cotter said, no formal alliance has yet been established between the MNR and the nuisance bear program. That is, the MNR is not eligible to receive the kits. However, any police car within a municipality that has a proven bear problem will be equipped and ready when a bear comes pawing.

Sinclair said at least four regional training sessions will be held over the next couple of months to teach eligible parties how to effectively use the kits.

PROVINCIAL ELECTION

Voters who aren't on list have two options for Thursday's election

In case you've forgotten, there's a provincial election this Thursday, June 3.

Since this is the first time that enumerators haven't gone door to door to register voters, there might be a few problems with the computer-generated voters' list. Check the card you received in the mail to verify where you're supposed to vote.

If you didn't receive the card, you have two options.

You can register at the returning office in Lindsay, 370 Kent St. W., Unit 13. (Travelling east along Kent Street, which is Lindsay's main street, from Hwy. 35, the office is in the mall on the north side of the street across from Canadian Tire.) Its phone number is 705-328-0368.

On the day of the election, you can go to your poll with some pieces of identification verifying that you are a resident of Ontario. If you don't have a driver's licence, or it doesn't have your current address, bring along a letter addressed to you at your current address, such as a hydro or phone bill. Be prepared to wait.

All the advance polls are over. Polls open June 3 at 9 a.m. and close at 8 p.m..

Doctors' clinic proposal focuses on giving students proper information

The council has approved a proposal from physicians at Haliburton's Family Medical Centre who want to run a sexual health clinic inside the school.

The clinic, staffed by doctors and public health nurses, would offer students education, confidential testing and counselling.

In addition to the clinic, members of the school council — comprised mainly of parents of high school students — also hope to see condom machines installed in student washrooms.

Trustees on the Trillium Lakelands District School Board still need to approve the proposed clinic before its doors could open in the school.

The clinic would be the first of its kind across the district, but similar in-school clinics exist within other Ontario school boards.

HHSS principal Gary Brohman said he and all other members of the school council supported the proposal after a recent presentation by Dr. Stephen Ferracuti of the medical centre.

"I'm definitely in favour of it. I think anything we can do to help students learn about safe sex is important," he said. "... I support it 100 per cent from the point that if students are already having pre-marital sex, let's be proactive not reactive."

Sue Ripley, chair of the school council, emphasized the main idea of the proposed clinic is not to promote the idea of sexual activity among students, but to give them better access to the information and birth control they need, if they're already sexually active.

"If these kids are even thinking about, they need to talk to somebody about it and get some information," said Ripley, who has a child in Grade 9.

The key factor that convinced the school council to approve the proposed clinic is the extensive counselling it will offer teens, Ripley explained.

"Students are going to receive counselling on all of their options, including abstinence. If they go to the clinic to get a prescription for birth control, they get counselling as well. They also have to have a medical like they would anywhere else."

Of the seven high schools across the district, Haliburton's is one of just two where students can't buy condoms from vending machines in their bathrooms.

Students at the school have been pushing to change that situation, said Brohman.

Ripley also said a student made the school aware that most other schools have condom machines.

"It was put to us that we were really behind the times and if we didn't think (sex) was already going on, we'd better get our heads out of the sand," she said.

The school council is hoping the proposed clinic could open at HHSS as early as next fall, if it receives school board approval.

OFF THE WALL ART:

Artist Dennis Cocchio, foreground, and mason David Townes install the sculpture Cocchio made for the foyer at Stuart Baker Elementary School in Haliburton. The sculpture of young children looking at the wildlife surrounding a lake had to be put together brick by brick. There's an open house at the new school this Saturday, beginning with a tour at 12:30 p.m.

Bike rodeo on June 12 will promote accident prevention

On Saturday, June 12, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Four Counties Brain Injury Association will hold a bike rodeo for kids in Grades 1 through 8 in conjunction with a car wash, barbecue and pony rides at the community centre in Haliburton.

Participants in the bike rodeo are asked to raise a minimum of $10 in pledges to help promote brain injury awareness and injury prevention in Haliburton County. A prize will be awarded to the highest pledge raiser. You can pick up pledge forms at Mingles Restaurant, Sharpley Sports or your school in Haliburton, Minden or Gooderham.

Participants will receive an information package and a State Farm Insurance laminated photo licence. Draw prizes supplied by Sharpley Sports and State Farm Insurance.

For those living in the Minden area and wishing to attend, a bus will transport participants and trucks will take bikes to the rodeo and back. Pick-up will be at the Minden Fire Hall at 11 a.m., returning at 2:30 p.m. For more information or to volunteer, call 1-800-854-9738.

Foundation opposes county levy for hospitals

■ Fundraising group wants more time

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

County council should hold off on imposing a tax levy to help pay for upgrades at local healthcare facilities, says the foundation in charge of raising money for the projects.

The foundation is worried the levy would scare off potential donors.

"We do have those fears of the tap being turned off," said Alison Rae, foundation manager.

The fundraising drive to cover the county's share of nearly $20-million in expansion and upgrade work at Haliburton Hospital and Hyland Crest has just begun to gain momentum, Rae told members of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board.

"We feel that we should be given time to do our job," she said at the board's meeting

Thursday afternoon.

Foundation members feel people would be less likely to voluntarily donate money to the project if they know they're going to be forced to pay a levy later.

The local share of the overall construction bill has been set at $5.5-million. The provincial government will contribute roughly $9.1-million and the federal government will provide $5.1-million to cover the remainder of the bill.

To date, the foundation has raised more than $2.2-million. That leaves it about $3.3-million more to raise.

Some county councillors — and at least one HHHS board member — have said it may be wise to raise the remainder by collecting a levy from all taxpayers.

At a meeting in April, Monmouth reeve Keith Tallman suggested the levy be set at $50 per household annually for two years.

HHHS board member Len Salvatori supported the proposed levy. He said the county should impose it as soon as possible to make sure the project costs are divided equally among the county's ratepayers.

"It seems to me the locals have given as much as they can give. There are some that have paid nothing. It's time everybody paid for this thing."

Board chairman Hugh Nichol acknowledged a levy may be needed in the future, but said the foundation should first be given an opportunity to raise what it can.

He estimated the foundation would likely be able to raise a total of about $3-million by the time construction is completed in about a year.

"The day will come when the dust settles and we're going to have a shortfall. In my opinion, it's going to be about $2-million or $2.5-million. That's when you go to the county (for a levy)," he said.

Nichol noted the foundation will continue to play an important role even after the projects are completed and paid off.

"The foundation is needed. It'll always be needed. Once the capital campaign is finished we're going to need all kinds of equipment."

Rae and other foundation members will meet with county council later this month to state their case against a levy in the near future.

Developer breaking tree-cutting bylaw: Committee

— Dysart, Stanhope and Anson, Hindon and Minden.

But that hasn't stopped them from clearcutting large areas of forest, thinning out hundreds more acres of trees and carving many kilometres of roads across the property.

Unless Woodland Ranch comes forward with development plans that show the heavy logging is required, committee members maintained the owners are breaking the county's recently adopted tree-cutting bylaw.

"These (development) concepts are fine as preliminary discussion, but when after all these months the land is continuing to be stripped and molded in contravention of the county tree-cutting bylaw we need something substantial to work with," Reeve Jeanne Anthon said.

She asked Darroch if Woodland Ranch had applied for an exemption to the tree-cutting bylaw.

"I'm not sure if that's been done. I don't want to say yes or not," Darroch answered.

He said logging on the property is "virtually finished."

Areas that have been clearcut will be planted and used as grazing land for horses and cattle, he said.

Minden councillors aren't alone in their concerns about logging at Woodland Ranch.

Last December, Tembec's Huntsville mill stopped buying logs from the ranch because it disagreed with how heavily the property was being cut.

Committee members repeatedly pressed Darroch to give them a more detailed account of the development proposed for Woodland Ranch, but he continued to give only general answers.

The plan is to target the ranch primarily at clients in RVs who would own a share in the development, Darroch said.

Facilities would be built for between 2,000 and 3,000 families in RVs over a 10-year period, he explained.

The ranch would offer horseback riding, cattle drives, hiking, biking and other recreational activities.

Darroch said he and his partners still want to create two 18-hole golf courses near Little Soyers Lake. However, those plans are on hold pending the outcome of an environmental hearing into the ranch's application to irrigate the courses with water from the lake.

The Soyers Lake Ratepayers Association has appealed a Ministry of Environment's decision, giving Woodland Ranch approval to take up to 2.72 million litres of water per day from Little Soyers Lake from spring to fall. The hearing will be held in Dysart's council chambers on June 28-29.

The owners of Woodland Ranch have previously said they also want to build townhomes and a 37,500-square-foot lodge.

Darroch said he and his partners have been slow to get a formal development proposal together because they're still trying to address zoning issues and other important planning questions.

"I really need some feedback from Minden," he said. "I don't want to spend tens of thousands of dollars on planners, if this isn't going to go through."

But committee members argued they are no position to tell Darroch whether his proposal might be approved until they can see a formal development plan.

Darroch questioned whether the property's existing zoning would permit an RV park and argued the development wouldn't be "a commercial venture."

Committee members were skeptical that the proposal wouldn't fall within the definition of a commercial development. They maintained Darroch and his partners have been told from the outset the proposed development would require rezoning.

Darroch agreed to meet with Minden's planner later in the week to further discuss the proposal.

He also said he would have a formal development plan in the municipality's hands before the Planning Advisory Committee's meeting on July 6.

Moore urged Darroch to keep Dysart and Stanhope up to date with the proposal since both of the municipalities will also have a say on the plans.

"I'm hoping I get support from Minden and the business community," said Darroch. "Maybe the numbers scare people — 2,000 to 3,000 families — but when you break it down, that's only a family per acre."

Reeve Anthon argued the municipality has already demonstrated its support by waiting so long for Woodland Ranch to get its plans together. "I think we have shown extraordinary patience compared to some municipalities."

About a dozen Soyers Lake cottagers and residents attended the meeting to learn more about the proposal for Woodland Ranch.

A striking success:

■ SSFC to capitalize on popularity of blacksmithing while forge is hot

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Blacksmithing is hot – and it's not just because of the forge.

Look around you – the art of blacksmithing is seen holding up flower planters, lighting the way along the garden path and going up staircases in architectural magazines.

To capitalize on the new popularity of an old craft, Sir Sandford Fleming College in Haliburton is hosting an intensive, 14-week Artist Blacksmith course.

"There's a huge renaissance of artist blacksmithing," campus director Barb Bolin says.

As well as attracting people already working in metal, sculpture, lighting and furniture, blacksmithing is also attracting consumers, which results in demand for more artist blacksmiths. Those already banging out the trade often can't keep up with the requests from garden centres and furniture stores.

"It's a huge industry," Bolin says.

A maximum of 17 students can sign up for the program which includes four credits in basic blacksmithing, four credits in advanced blacksmithing, two credits in art appreciation, two credits in drawing, one credit in design and one credit in applied design.

This combination of both practical and creative skills is very important, says Bolin, especially for craftspeople who rely on commissions. It's one thing to be able to create something with a forge, and another to be able to work out a design on paper with a prospective client.

"It's how things balance and work together," she says.

A program description tells students "your aesthetic development will be taking place on three levels throughout the program. Firstly, by looking at the works of artists and blacksmiths from other times and places. Secondly through your own drawing courses you will be able to draw and describe objects progresses, you will be preparing finished drawings of the type of work you might want to present to a client. Finally, through your design and applied design courses, you will bring all of this knowledge together and relate it to the principles and elements of design to create imaginative and original work."

Students will be in class – at the industrial park in Haliburton – for 32 hours a week, plus have 15 hours a week of independent study, which is supervised studio time.

The teachers will be René

"There's a huge renaissance of artist blacksmithing," says the director of the Haliburton campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College, which is hosting a new, 14-week intensive course in the industrial park in Haliburton this winter. One of the teachers will be René Petitjean, at left, a professional artist from Creemore.

Petitjean, who started as a clay artist but moved into metal, and Lloyd Johnson, a traditional blacksmith who lives south of Lindsay.

Sir Sandford is offering this course, as well as one in painting and drawing, as a way of building on its greatest strength: the Haliburton School of Fine Arts. These types of courses allow it to expand to year-round programming and also fit a niche, that of short-term but intensive courses for people who might not have eight months to commit to a program.

The cost of the Blacksmithing Artist program is $1,700, and it will run from September 13 to December 17 in the Industrial Park.

Draw, paint, create: Intensive course allows artists to build portfolios

'People interested in the more traditional artistic pursuit of drawing and painting also have the opportunity to enhance their skills in an intensive 15-week course.

Classes start September 13 in Haliburton for Draw, Paint, Create and participants can earn 14 credits towards their fine arts diploma.

A brochure for the program says "the extensive portfolio of drawings and paintings that you generate will attest to your refined skills in self-expression and control of the medium. This will prepare you for juried shows, group exhibits, gallery contacts, continuing studies or further studio work."

Lessons include canvass preparation, colour theories, composition, using light to describe form and texture and exploring realism, abstraction and non-representational art.

The list of instructors has yet to be finalized, but one will be Dennis Cliff, a long-time favourite at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts "whose breadth of knowledge" will serve the course well, says campus director Barb Bolin.

The course will be taught at the former Victoria Street School.

"The building is such a perfect spot for drawing and painting with its high ceilings and big windows," Bolin says.

The cost is $1,700 plus materials. For more information, contact Barb Bolin at 457-1680 or <bbolin@flemingc.on.ca>.

Election, yawn

EVERY TUESDAY, THE EDITORIAL STAFF at The Echo gets together to talk about what will be in the following week's paper. (In the winter the "editorial staff" is all two of us, but now with three, it almost feels like a real meeting.) Some events are already scheduled, yet for the most part, there are never enough of them to fill an entire paper. That means we have to come up with ideas on our own. What can be news this week?

For the past few weeks, we've been stumped when it comes to election stories. The provincial election is the main news story across the province, but here in Haliburton, there aren't even many campaign signs to remind you that your vote is being sought by the various candidates. Few signs and not even one all-candidates meeting within the county's borders.

And who are the candidates? Even though The Echo is one of the best ways to get a candidates' message out to voters, three of the candidates have not even bothered to get in touch with us to ask for free publicity (a story about their beliefs, concerns and solutions.) Do they know so little about Haliburton County that echo

they don't know The Echo exists? Or perhaps they don't care about votes from this end of the riding? If they're waiting for us to phone them, how are we supposed to know who they are and where to look up their numbers in the phone book? We haven't felt that the onus is on us to seek out candidates who should be doing a better job of seeking votes. However, to avoid confusion when people stand behind the ballot box, let it now be said there are six candidates to choose from: Independent Brad Bradamore, Rick Denyer of the NDP, Chris Hodgson of the Progressive Conservatives, Sharon McCrae of the Liberals, Charles Olito of the Freedom Party, and someone from the Natural Law party. When we phoned the returning office to get this someone's name, the staff there didn't even know. Not only that, "I couldn't even tell you how to contact him."

Apart from the candidates, there are the issues. The past four years have seen tremendous changes in the way government does (or doesn't) do business. Strong feelings about those changes exist. Yet in Haliburton County, there are few organized groups to debate such issues. There are the teachers' unions, who made their feelings about education reform known during the teachers' strike, but who aren't making a concerted effort locally to keep their concerns in the forefront of voters' minds. The teachers unions have not approached The Echo once during the election campaign. There are no organized local groups fighting against poverty and the welfare reforms. No local environmental groups pressing for stricter regulations. Local hospitals or the health services board haven't been speaking out about healthcare. Who are you going to call?

Here at The Echo, we've had to wonder whether we should be manufacturing election stories. Holding us back, however, is the knowledge that during an election campaign, all you'll get from the candidates is the party line, which is not the local line and we are a local paper. Our job is to focus on local events and issues, not the overall provincial picture.

In fact, it seems that most people in Haliburton County weren't waiting for the election campaign to decide who to vote for. They've been weighing their options for the past four years, judging the government's successes and failures along the way, both on a province-wide and local level. They don't need to hear the candidates' speeches to know where they'll put their X on the ballot form.

letters to the editor

Many made Thalia's Voice heard

To the Editor:

As co-directors of Thalia's Voice (Haliburton County's new Festival of Women and the Arts), we would like to thank this community for its support. Numerous businesses, community organizations and individuals contributed to making our first year a success. Some of the people whose work warrants particular mention include Eric Lilius, Marvella Smith, Robin Thomas, Heather Ross, John and Lindsay Beaudry, Lou Consy, Fay Martin, Rick and Shannon Harding, Rob Stonehouse, Barry Hayward, Sharon Lynch, Brad Sales, Jaimie Dollo, the members of the Haliburton Community Cooperative, and the staff of Family Services.

It is truly a testament of our community that everyone was willing to help us, especially the youth. We experienced an enormous amount of support from a group of high school volunteers who really did make the festival possible. These volunteers are Doug Clarke, Dan Craig, Alison Kennedy, Helen Harris, Devon Ryan, Micah Smith, Ann Raeback, Trina Howe, Graeme Fawcett, Kim Mulholland, Jenn Orpana, Amanda McClenaghan, Jenn Minto, Craig Hughes, Matt Harding, Gaten Davis, Gavin Simms and, of course, the students in Mr. Stonehouse's wood shop class. Thank you, one and all.

We would also like to thank the staff of Thalia's Voice, all of whom are from the county; Toronto's Regional Directors Erin Lynch and Jeremy Scheffee (who also did our graphic designs), Ottawa's Regional Director Cassie Weyrich, Kingston's Regional Directors Sarah Levis and Kevin Brezina, Peterborough Regional Director Tanya Castle, and here in Haliburton, Andrea Hughes (our art director and creator of our logo), and Kaija Sirella. Congratulations on a job well done.

Last, but not least, we would like to thank everyone who came to the festival. We appreciate your support and look forward to seeing you next year.

Gay marriages should be rejected

To the Editor:

On May 21 the Supreme Court of Canada redefined the term 'spouse' in Canadian law. Homosexual "marriage", adoption and fostering will all become legal realities in every Canadian province. This means that 90 laws in Ontario and another 55 federally will have to be re-written. Unelected judges, rather than our elected representatives, will again have decided how Canadian society is to function.

What kind of a society are we living in that would allow a few unelected judges decide that it is perfectly acceptable for children to grow up without a mother or a father? It is unacceptable to me to put children purposely at risk to satisfy the special interests of a tiny minority.

We should be asking our Members of Parliament to be counted on to stand up to the Court. Our MPs must use the 'notwithstanding clause' and reject this court decision. We should be asking our elected representatives to work to defend marriage and family law in Ontario, for the protection of our children.

Cool places

mously tall and the shade was actually provided by all the other trees nearby, spruce and hemlock and birch. The combination of shade and the music of wind through pine needles made this Meg's current favourite cool place.

Over the years, there had been others. The river by the old cottage had afforded many cool places from which to escape the searing heat of a July afternoon. Shaded by cedar, Meg would find green-brown water slipping over and around rocks, with secret pools perfect for lying down. She'd make her way in carefully so as not to slip on the mossy bottom and feel the delicious coolness edge slowly upward from her ankle. When the water was mid-thigh, she would ease herself down into its dark movement, her feet searching for a brace amidst the larger rocks. She'd look down at her body shimmering and wavy as the water passed over it. She felt as though she could close her eyes and lie there forever.

Sometimes, after lying that way in the river, she would then make her way up the path and into a large overgrown field. It was a hot field so the best time to walk through it was after being in the river. Monarch butterflies flitted amongst the tall dusty milkweed plants and the scent of raspberries was in the air, mingling with the sweet scent of milkweed and the dry, grassy meadow smell.

Meg would trek and trek through the tall grass, mindful of hornets and deerflies, and marvelling in the feeling that she was the only person in the world at that moment. After a while however, the lack of shade would take its toll and that was generally when she moved over to the maple that stood surrounded by sumach. The rock outcropping near the tree's base had mossy spots and here Meg could lie on her back and look up through the leaves to spots of blue beyond. Here she was in a comfortably cool refuge from the heat of the unshaded meadow.

Meg had only the faintest memory of the root cellar at the farm, a recollection of going from the blinding glare of full sunlight into a place where she was momentarily blind. Dug into the side of a hill, the root cellar had been used at one time to store vegetables like potatoes, carrots and turnips. Some kind of wooden door was moved or removed, Meg couldn't remember now, and she had stepped into a place that seemed of a different world. The smell was damp and earthy, the air thick with it and on the ground, a square of light from the doorway and no more. She had marvelled at its sudden coolness, the muffled quiet. Here would be a good place for an afternoon nap, much better than the hot upstairs bedroom. But then she was shooed back outside, never to set foot in the root cellar again.

Finally, there had been the far cabin. That was what it was called, back when Meg's parents rented cabins in the summer. The far cabin wasn't always rented, probably because it was the farthest away from the main road and that made some people uneasy. It was also situated in such a way on the bay that it faced north. As a result it was almost always cool inside, despite the lack of insulation, which was common in those days. Meg used to go for a hot afternoon walk and end up at the far cabin. The wooden floor felt as smooth and cool as the river beneath her summer bare feet. She would lean on the widow sill overlooking the bay and pretend it was her house and she could live there forever and ever.

If, when she arrived back at the cottage later, her mother asked her where she had been and she told her the far cabin, her mother usually shook her head in envy. "Oh I'll bet it was nice and cool there," she'd smile. And Meg would nod. "It's the coolest place of all," she'd say.

pic of the past

On a trip back to the Highlands in 1958, June (McPhail) Forsythe, who had been born in Maple Lake, sat in her car on Haliburton's main street and took this photo of Buck Baker's barber shop. The shop is now the location of Perfect Prints. Our thanks to Mrs. Forsythe's daughter, Christine Horton of Haliburton, for sharing this week's Pic of the Past with us.

Mark the millennium with 'gifts'

If you're looking for a memorable and meaningful way to mark the millennium, Canada's community foundations have the answer.

It's called the Catalogue of Possibilities and it's full of hundreds of examples of "gifts" we can give to our communities to make them stronger, more vibrant places to live. The gifts can be of time, money or energy. They can signify our hopes, values and priorities for the future.

The Catalogue of Possibilities is a starting point to get groups thinking about a gift that's right for them. The examples in the catalogue are meant to inspire families, neighbours, co-workers, book clubs, play groups – any group can come up with their own gift.

What kinds of gifts can you give?

The sky is the limit! Gifts can be large or small. Think about what is important to you now and in the future. For example,

- Create a neighbourhood study centre with other parents where kids or teens can do homework together.

- Have your bridge club support local artists by organizing impromptu galleries in restaurants or offices.

- Talk with seniors about creating a "volunteer grandparents" program to share your wisdom and companionship with local children.

- Build a community playground with your neighbours
- Work with your school friends on a contest to create a coat of arms for your community.

- Get your biking neighbours together to organize a neighbourhood bike safety session

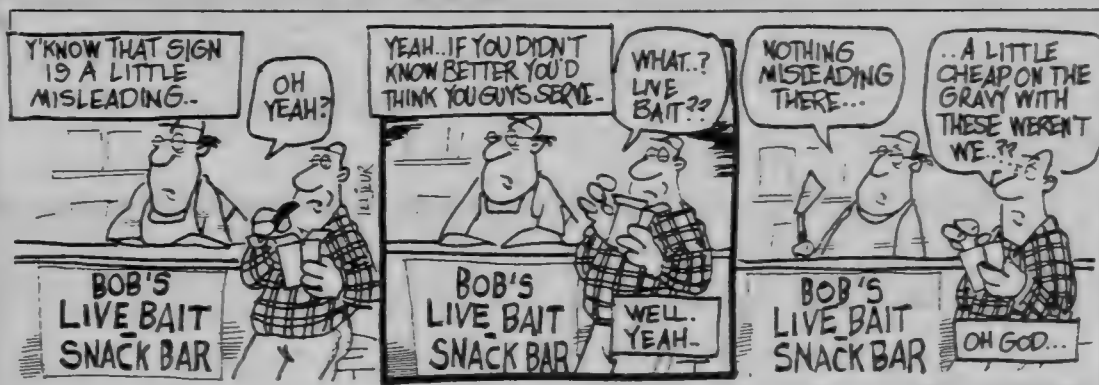

- Get your office to spend a day doing odd jobs for seniors or people who need support

- Gifts can be anything your imagination or resources will allow.

The Catalogue of Possibilities can be downloaded off the internet at www.ourmillennium.ca or picked up at your local Community Foundation office. For the price of postage, you can also receive a catalogue by mail. Call Our Millennium at 1-877-880-6455.

Do you have any old family photos that tell a story of how Haliburton used to be? The Echo would like to publish them in our regular Pic of the Past spot on this page. We're also interested in old photos of buildings or street scenes. All photos will be returned after they've been printed. Photos can be dropped off at The Echo's office on the corner of Highland St. and Cedar Ave.

Do you find that by the time dinner rolls around there is nothing to make or you just grab something that is not really good for you? Most people do, but if you take the time to prepare some nutritious meals and freeze them for the upcoming week, you will always have something for dinner and snacks. Muffins and casseroles freeze well. All it takes is two good hours of prep work and you're ready for the week ahead. Think of it as time for yourself, you can cook and relax to your favorite music. It will make your life a lot easier as well as your families. Go ahead have fun and try it.

Here is an easy recipe from Oprah's favorite recipe book. If you're looking for a new low-fat cookbook this one is great, a friend lent it to me and I love it.

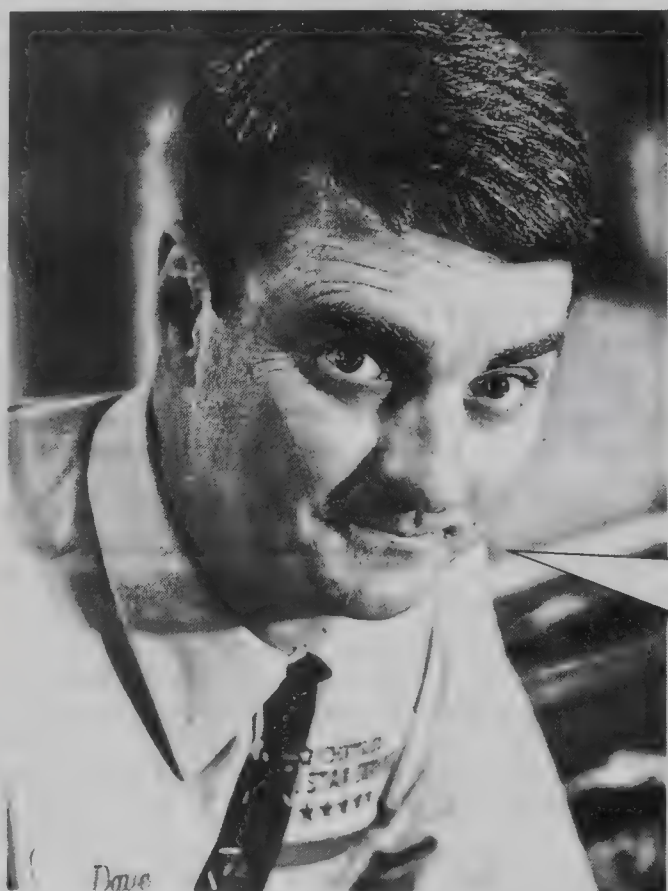

Spice Bran Muffins

Light vegetable oil cooking spray

- 1½ cup molasses
- 2 tbs honey
- 2 large egg whites
- 1¼ c. plain nonfat yogurt
- 1¼ c. 2 % milk
- 1½ c. wheat bran
- 1 c. whole wheat flour
- 1½ tsp. baking powder
- 1 tbs. Ground ginger
- 1 tsp. ground cloves
- 1¼ c. chopped walnuts
- 1¼ c. golden raisins

Preheat oven to 350

Warm molasses and honey in a small saucepan over low heat just until it begins to steam. Remove the pan from the heat and set it aside to cool. Whisk egg whites, yogurt, and milk together in a large mixing bowl until blended. Whisk in the molasses and honey mixture. Using a wooden spoon, stir in the bran, flour, baking powder, and spices fold in walnuts and raisins. Bake 15 to 20 min.

A hoppin' place

It was mayhem in the gym at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School on Friday, but mayhem with a purpose. Students from all grades took part in the Jump Rope for Heart and by getting pledges from friends and family beforehand, they were able to raise more than $7,600 for the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

■ Golfers tee off in memory of Tim Heming

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Staff Reporter

Tim Heming's legacy continued this year as players teed off for the fourth annual memorial golf tournament and barbecue last Thursday.

Four years ago, at the age of 12, Tim, a much-loved son and student at Archie Stouffer, died as a result of complications from spina bifida and hydrocephalus.

In honour of Tim and his penchant for helping others, the charity golf tournament was born.

"It's a way of keeping alive a special child and helping other special children," said Tim's father, Rob Heming.

Twenty golfers participated in the friendly competition at Minden's Beaverbrook Golf Club. Each golfer received a memorial cup, designating all players as winners.

After nine holes of golf, people gathered at Sunny Rock Lodge Bed and Breakfast for the barbecue.

Sally Moore, owner the lodge and a long-time friend of the Heming family, co-ordinates the annual event which raised $700 this year. Moore also manages the bursary fund on behalf of the family.

The fund, Moore said, "is to help kids with disabilities live life — sort of like Make a Wish foundation but on a smaller scale."

Children with special needs throughout Haliburton and Huntsville are eligible to apply for the bursary.

The money may be used to meet the medical needs of physically challenged children or to send them to summer camps.

Rob Heming said his son played an integral part in changing peoples' opinions of what it means to be disabled.

TIM'S LEGACY LIVES ON:

Golfers gather outside Sunny Rock Lodge Bed and Breakfast last Thursday for the memorial barbecue. About 30 people attended this year's fourth annual event, raising $700 towards a bursary fund set up in memory of young Tim. Front, from left: Sally Moore (lodge owner and event coordinator), Shawn Heming, Jesse Heming (Tim's brother), Andy Dawson, Kerry Heming, Rob Heming (Tim's father), Steve Heming, Al Will, Barbara Kaasalainen, Ginny Heming, Eric Burk, Doug Aldworth, Simon Wells, Geoff Park, Marie Gage, Dean Sisson, Kevin Thomson, Rob Barton, and an unidentified man. Tim's mother Laurie had not yet arrived at the Lodge at the time of the picture.

"The school (Archie Stouffer) changed a lot of their systems and ways of doing business by making access (for the physically challenged) easier. Everybody loved him — that's what helps keep this fund alive every year."

PURE AND CLEAN:

Gambian villagers collect fresh water from a well made possible because of funds raised through HAVE's annual Walk for Water in Haliburton. This year HAVE hopes to raise enough money to help drill 23 new wells in India.

Walk for Water returns

□ Fundraiser to bring water to poor countries set for Saturday

Saturday will provide cardio-phobes with the perfect reason to exercise.

By lacing up your sneakers and registering at the Head Lake bandshell, you can help provide communities in India and The Gambia with fresh drinking water, as part of Help A Village Effort's 17th annual Walk For Water campaign.

Ron Reid, a resident living just outside of Carnarvon, has walked in the last 16 pilgrimages. Reid says it's important for him to know that he's doing something to help the have-nots.

Reid has been involved with HAVE practically from the beginning.

HAVE is a group exclusive to Haliburton.

In 1982, Gerry Feltham, who was living in this area at the time, started the Walk for Water project.

Last year, $14,000 was raised. This year, the group is setting its goal at $20,000.

The money, Reid says, will be used towards drilling 23 wells throughout India this year. The Canadian International Development Agency has offered to chip in double the amount that is raised.

Funding will also go towards establishing environmental programs in Gambia, a tiny line on the map in northwest Africa. In Gambia, some people walk miles for water.

HAVE has already set up contact with two schools in The Gambia, desperate for good, clean water. Windpumps will bring clean water to the schools and orchards have been planted in the yards. In the orchards Gambian student are learning environmental science — about trees and their importance in anchoring the soil.

"Without the trees, soil just turns to dust," said Lon Duncombe, a five-year volunteer with the Gambia project.

Duncombe said reliable contacts based in the targeted countries will ensure that the organization gets value for its money.

So lay your skepticism aside and slap on some sunscreen. Walkers can choose from either a 5- or 16 km distance. Registration begins at 8 am.

THEY MAKE YOUR HEART POUND. EVEN IN PARK.

At ages three and four, Brian and William Tink couldn't even decipher the alphabet, but they knew how to read sheet music. Although the Stanhope brothers are trained in classical violin, they prefer playing traditional fiddle music. "It's livelier," says William, right. The boys are now 12 and 13 years old, and plan to compete in the CNE's Rising Stars competition this summer

FOR MOST PEOPLE it's not hard to learn to play the violin a little. The difficult part is in learning to play it well. This adage is adapted from a beginner's book on musical instruments by James Lincoln Collier who wanted to help young people decide which instrument they should play.

For two local brothers however, this message was lost in its medium when they first started playing the violin.

At ages three and four, Brian and William Tink couldn't even decipher the alphabet yet, let alone read a book about their instrument. But the pair were already adept at reading sheet music.

Ten years later the boys' talent and sustaining passion have converted the skeptics who thought the boys were just going through a phase.

This July, the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School students, who perform in duets as well as solos, will be stringing their stuff at an audition for the Canadian National Exhibition's Rising Star competition.

The Toronto competition is a big deal for the Tinks. Only 24 kids will be selected out of 700 entries.

At the audition the boys will play what they do best — Canadian fiddle music.

While the boys are trained classically, fiddle music's upbeat tempo and room for play lured the brothers. "It's livelier," William chimes in. Also, Canadian audiences seem to favour fiddlers.

"Because the boys play a specific style of music," says their teacher, Michelle Charlton, a professional fiddler herself from the age of 12, "— a fun type of music, they get recognized a lot faster than if they were playing classical."

This is especially true in rural areas, where there's an older generation, she adds. "People appreciate it because it's 'their music.'"

Every two weeks, Brian and William travel with their father, Brian Sr., to Charlton's home in Pickering for their lessons. While Charlton is Michelle's thinks quite highly of them," he adds.

And she does. At this point they are her only students. Since Charlton just had a baby and teaches music full-time with the Scarborough school board, she's had to pare down the number of private students she takes on.

Charlton said she chose to keep the boys on because she enjoys watching their progress.

"It's a lot of work (to teach full-time, have a family and keep teaching when you get home) and I wouldn't co-ordinate it if I didn't think they had talent and potential."

Their potential is best displayed during the summer competition circuit.

Practically every weekend from May to November is booked with a competition. In the past five years, the boys estimate they've played in 110 contests. They say they hardly mind though, since it's like having a summer job. With the prize money they win from placing at or near the top at contests throughout Ontario and Quebec, Brian and William get to indulge their leisure pursuits.

Brian's a fan of remote control boats and helicopters while William is crazy for Star Wars memorabilia.

"I've got like 300 Star Wars figures," he boasts, "and thousands of cards."

In the basement room where William practises for an hour a day, many of the figures he's bought are stuck to the walls, still enclosed in their plastic and cardboard cases to protect their collectible value.

With all of the money involved and the positive feedback they've been getting from their audiences, the boys got business cards made about a month ago. They've already had some requests for parties and a wedding.

With the amount of time the brothers spend together, especially when preparing duets, they don't seem clingy or cliquey.

Actually there's an interesting dynamic between them. Their mother, Sophie, says the boys married name, most fans and people involved in the Canadian music community, know her by her maiden name, Rubiniecki.

It's worth the two hour drive, said Brian Sr., because Michelle is practically family. The boys have been under her instruction for about five years now, from the time they were living in Newcastle, when the trip was only 40 minutes long.

"She's been a competitor and most importantly, I think she are competitive but supportive of one another. But Brian seems much more intent on getting things precisely right.

"After I'm done (practising or performing), if I've made a mistake, I usually go into a private area where I can practise it over and over so I don't screw up again."

Mom pops in to say that if the boys do make a mistake, it's usually just a very small one, undetectable to the untrained ear.

"The audience wouldn't know," she says.

But the boys sure do, especially in a duet where players count on one another for accuracy.

At one contest, the adjudicator noted that, in the future, Brian should avoid glaring at his brother during a performance if he plays a wrong note.

Even Brian laughs at his intensity now. While he says he loves performing, it's hard not to want to play perfectly and win.

Dispositions aside, Brian Sr. is complaint-free about taxiing the boys around the country.

"It's well worth the time spent on the road," he says. "I wouldn't trade it for nothing."

eaving course for children wins award of merit

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

TWO LOCAL WEAVERS have won an award of merit for a course they designed and taught at the Haliburton School of Fine Arts last summer.

Wendy Bateman and her assistant, Ginny Muenzel, were commended by the Ontario Handweavers and Spinners association for their innovative course on introducing children as young as five to the joys of dyeing, spinning and weaving.

The award was part of the association's Fibre Arts in the Community project. The project's goals were to

- increase the public's understanding of the craft through direct contact with craftspeople and hands-on experience

- bring fibre arts and crafts into the homes, schools, offices, factories, hotels and public spaces of Ontario

- and increase the marketing, teaching, demonstrating and exhibiting abilities of OHS members.

The local project achieved all three goals.

Twenty-two children enrolled in last year's week-long course, a first for the School of Fine Arts. Younger children attended in the morning while older ones gathered in the afternoon.

Not only did they learn how to use a loom, but they also got to spin their own fleece into bracelets, rugs and other items. In the process, they also learned about the history of weaving, "From Ewe to You."

In a letter from OHS Vice-president Janet Taylor to Bateman, who has taught several adult courses at the school, Taylor says "on behalf of the board of directors of the Ontario Handweavers and Spinners I extend our most sincere congratulations..."

"The jurors noted that you and Virginia Muenzel worked as a team. You organized a well-planned, week-long course at a college, a first with children of this age. The documentation was thorough and clearly presented."

As an extra plus, this course outlined will be published so that other weavers can let a new generation discover this satisfying craft.

Teacher bares his scalp

Giving math teacher Don Lewis a rather close hair cut are Corey Casey, problem solver Courtney Wilson & Ryan Day

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Courtney Wilson's problem-solving skill cost her teacher his hair Friday afternoon.

Don Lewis, a math teacher at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, challenged his students to figure out a complex problem last week and came up on the sharp end of a pair of clippers when one of them cracked it.

Courtney's prize for solving the problem was the opportunity to shave her teacher's head in front of her classmates.

"I thought there was the possibility one of them might answer it, but it's a hard problem. It's a very hard problem," Lewis said Friday at lunch, while waiting for his barber to turn up for her prize.

Lewis first challenged his OAC Finite Math class to solve the problem the previous Friday. He offered to bump up the winner's final grade by 1 per cent.

By Wednesday when the problem remained unsolved, he issued the challenge to all his classes and sweetened the pot by promising to have his head shaved bald.

It took Courtney, a Grade 12 student in Lewis's technology math class, until that evening to come up with the correct answer.

When it came to collecting her prize, Courtney had to be coaxed into actually taking a turn with the clippers. But there were plenty of other students eager to give her a hand.

For those who want to test their problem-solving abilities, here's the question: You have a balance scale. You also have three pairs of billiard balls. One pair is white, one pair is blue, one pair is red. In each pair, one of the balls is a little heavier than the other. All the heavy balls weigh the same. All the light balls weight the same. In two weighings on a balance scale, identify all the light balls and all the heavy balls.

The answer to the problem is too long to print here — it took Courtney a full page of notes to explain how she came to her correct conclusion. Those who want to see if they've got the right answer can drop by the Echo office for a look at Courtney's solution.

Minden Legion donation allows Hyland Crest residents to enjoy better mobility and independence

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Staff Reporter

Three people received a gift this month that will cover the cost of their independence.

On May 19, Minden Legion Branch 636, presented a $2,500 donation to Hyland Crest Home. The money will help three special needs residents pay for specialized wheelchairs.

"In order for those people to be independent at all," said Linda Robertson, the Home's program director, "they have to have a specialized chair."

Depending on the degree of specialization, prices can range from $3,000 to $30,000. One of the chairs purchased by the Home cost roughly $4,100.

While the federally-run Assisted Devices Program covers part of that total, residents must pay 25 per cent of the chair's total cost. In all three cases, the legion's donation will cover the residents' portion of the cost.

Since many residents do not have substantial personal funds to pay one quarter of the wheelchair's full price, they have to suffer with the alternative.

The alternative for these residents would be to lie in bed all day or use a regular chair provided by the facility — one which likely wouldn't fit properly and cause sores or bruising. Gel cushioning in the new chairs molds to the body, relieving pressure sores.

Empathizing with the frustration that must mount for some residents financially cut-off from basic comforts, moved the legion to make the donation.

"We knew there was a need (to help residents buy chairs)," said Legion president Francine Newton. "It's impossible for residents to come up with that kind of money."

A BIG HELP:

Minden Legion president Francine Newton presents Hyland Crest's Linda Robertson a cheque for $2,500 while Legionnaire Bob Hurtle looks on.

Talk about Alzheimers is very informative for volunteers and caregivers

Hello once again. Our tea party on Thursday (May 20th) was much enjoyed with the Haliburton Highland Golfers hosting. We had a very pleasant time and we thank them for their treats.

The following morning, Ruth and Jack Worthington were here to entertain us with their music which is always great. That afternoon, we were again entertained, this time with the Pickards for happy hour. As you can guess, we do love our music.

The Victoria Day weekend was fairly quiet, not like the rest of the town and surrounding areas. We hear that everywhere was packed to the walls and beyond. It seems that people just love to be up here whenever they can. Aren't we fortunate that we can enjoy it year round.

We know that the rain that occurred might have spoiled it for some, but it really was a Godsend. Everything benefited, our gardens, water levels and forests.

During chapel on Tuesday morning, with Father Fellion, we remembered Evelyn Cox. Quite a few of us attended to pay our respects.

That afternoon there was a meeting for volunteers and caregivers. The guest speaker was Sandra Frise from the Alzheimer Society. It was really good to see so many people here. The meeting was very informative and we know that those who attended appreciated the opportunity to learn more about this disease.

The Norland Hillbillies were here for our pub night. As usual, quite a crowd turned out to enjoy this group. We were very pleased to see Bob back again, looking so good, and singing once more.

There will not be a Senior League column the week of June 7th, as the day we usually meet and gather our news will be voting day here at Hyland Crest. So we are taking a week off. We will just have to catch up on our news the following week.

However, we can announce the upcoming birthdays: Dorothea Lynch - June 1, Peggy Packer - June 2, Sidney Roberts - June 4, Edna McElwain - June 5, Winnifred Barnum - June 6, and Lola Prentice - June 11. We wish them all a happy, happy day.

ARTISANS' MARKET PLACE OPENS IN KINMOUNT STUDIO:

Kinmount and area's artisans guild unveiled its latest project last month—the Artisans' Market Place in downtown Kinmount. About 30 artisans are displaying their paintings, glass work and other handcrafted items at the Guild's studio from May to October every week between Thursday and Monday, 11-4pm. The Guild also plans to hold studio classes and workshops conducted by artisans.

Byron McKay built this castle structure while fellow artisan Nancy Thurston painted the detail. Castle accessories—capes made by Nancy and play-swords by Byron make fun times for children or adults who appreciate their inner child.

Choice Pickin's:

Tom Lang, owner of Kinmount's rejuvenated grocery store opened its Main Street doors earlier this month. The Independent Grocer is stocked with fresh produce and a larger selection of meats. Lang has reorganized the store's interior and offers customers new product lines to try out. After 27 years in the grocery business, Lang says he's confident he can turn the store into a focal point for Kinmount's residents and cottagers alike.

HUT TWO, THREE, FOUR!

Annual review:

In a sweltering heat that caused some fainting spells, Haliburton's Royal Canadian Cadet Corps 1129, held its annual review last Sunday at The Highlands Curling Club. The review is a tribute to the cadets' eight month training year. In front of family, friends and an external high ranking officer who inspects the cadets' neatness and salutations, the group demonstrated marching, rifle and bush skills. Over the last few years, the group's emphasis has been shifting from army to adventure skills.

"While it's army cadets," said Officer cadet O'Connell, "we're not out there every day with guns. It's mostly about respect, survival skills, discipline and getting along with a team—you help each other look good." O'Connell noted that it's also one of the best activities for young adults since it's free.

Exhibitors at the Home & Vacation show take the time to answer questions in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere

Arena, Curling Club filled to capacity

dows, doors, paints, insulation and stoves.

The other half of the curling club will feature boats and motors, a large fish tank display from the Haliburton Highlands Outdoor Association, satellites and many other exhibits.

The arena is a busy place this year. All booth spaces are fully occupied. There are many new exhibitors. You won't want to miss this opportunity to purchase that craft or decorating item you need at special show prices.

The Haliburton Curling Club sponsors this show and will again be hosting at the large beer tent complete with hamburgers, hot dogs and live entertainment.

The outside display area in front of the curling club will feature boats, tractors, pontoon rafts and docks.

The show starts Friday with a parade and ribbon cutting ceremony at 4 p.m.

This show is a must see for any home or cottage owner. Come out and enjoy the fun. Meet your neighbours and talk to the friendly exhibitors. For show information call Wayne Hussey at (705) 457-2892.

One stop shopping ...

With scores of businesses represented and hundreds of products displayed, the Home & Vacation show is an ideal place to check out prices and get information of numerous products that might be on your wish or need list. Above, Doug Moore meets visitors to last year's show as they browse the Newbatts Furniture and Appliances booth. At right, visitors compare features at one of the Emmerson Lumber displays.

Making friends:

■ The Home & Vacation show brings local businesses and consumers together in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere, where the feeling of a small town predominates. Even if you're not looking to buy a specific product or service, a visit to the show is a terrific way to get to know the people behind the businesses.

Business Brief

Welcome y'all:

Although her Southern drawl seems a little out of place in the Highlands, Dixie Duncan's Alabama born hospitality is as welcoming as her new Bed and Breakfast at Halbiem Crescent. Visitors strolled into York Duncan House and stayed awhile last Saturday, at the B & B's grand opening. Technically the house has been welcoming guests since December. She's already had international boarders from Hong Kong and New Zealand. Duncan poses outside her home with her son Jeff York.

The Chumbley-Sisson families attended the wedding, on Saturday, May 22, of Laura Jane Chumbley to Kurt Halfyard in Solina, Ontario. Best wishes to the happy couple from the whole community.

The sympathy of the community goes to Bill and Myra Marshall in the death of Bill's mother, Lucy Marshall. The funeral was held at the Haliburton Community Funeral Home, the Rev. Peter Walford-Davis officiating. A reception was held afterwards at the Centre.

We had Alan, Beth and Andy Cooper home for the long weekend. Since many of the local residents will be unable to attend Andy and Kim's wedding in B.C. at the end of August, a reception is planned for early in September at the Centre. An announcement will appear in The Echo in time for you to plan.

Sid Cooper, president of District 18 (Victoria-Haliburton) attended the annual meeting of the Retired Teachers of Ontario, RTO, in Toronto at the Colony Hotel, at the end of May.

712 CARDS OF THANKS

SYLVIA AND CAROLINE CLARIDGE offer a big thank you to all the participants of the Friday Night Live musical benefit on May 21, at Haliburton United Church. To Barb Fawcett's organizing skills; to all the musicians and singers in the varied groups - His Own, Joyful Noise, Lakeside Baptist, Haliburton United, Bill Payne - and all those in attendance who supported our mission to aid handicapped children in a school and orphanage in China, God bless you all.

THE FAMILY OF the late Father David Kelly are very appreciative of our family, friends, local clergy, and parishioners of the various parishes which he served, for their phone calls, cards, visits, gifts of food, memorial donations, prayers, and special masses during Father's brief illness resulting in his death. The support we received from the Diocese of Pem broke, in particular Bishop O'Brien and Monsignor Barry, and priests from many parishes was much appreciated during a very difficult time. Thank you to the Knights of Columbus for their very impressive show of support and participation in the service. To Baragar Funeral Home, and especially Tim, thank you for your very professional services and support. To the paramedics who transported Father Kelly, also Bancroft, Belleville, and Kingston General Hospital for your care, consideration and services which were excellent. Such a loss of a dear son, brother and uncle is very difficult, but the support we had from everyone was overwhelming. Annie Lewis, Carman and JoAnne, Steve and Susie, Jennifer and Jason.

THE WILBERFORCE & AREA POLICE VOLUNTEER ASSOCIATION would like to thank all our supporters and volunteers who made this year's roast beef dinner such a whopping success.

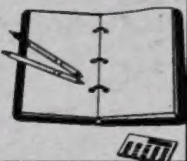

WITH THANKS

The John (Jack) DeYoung family would like to express their sincere appreciation and gratitude to all those who offered their kind support to our family during our difficult time and for the donations made in memory of Jack DeYoung. Special thanks to the doctors and nurses at the Haliburton Hospital; the Haliburton Ambulance Services; Father John Burchat and those who participated in the service; Dwaine, Molly and Ron of the Haliburton Community Funeral Home; the Ladies Auxiliary for the wonderful lunch they prepared; and to the gang on Haliburton Lake who helped in our spring clean-up.

Register JK kids early to avoid overcrowded classrooms at Archie Stouffer this September

Archie Stouffer Elementary School needs to know now whether a new Kindergarten student will be starting school in September.

Why now? This is because of the funding formulae for schools. Firstly, money for teaching materials, equipment, and books, etc., depends on the number of students in the school. Secondly, the number of teachers the school can have depends on the school knowing how many students to expect in September, 1999.

Last year the school was expecting 68 students in Junior and Senior Kindergarten. But over 100 children turned up! As a result, the school struggled all year to adjust to this unexpected extra number without additional teaching staff. Kindergarten classes had as many as 27 students.

To avoid a repeat of last year, the school needs to know about any new student now in order to organize staff and classes effectively. Even if some parents are not sure whether their JK or SK child will start in September, he or she should still be registered with the school. It does not commit that child to having to attend if they are not ready in September.

So, if you know of a child who will be age 4 by December 31, 1999, who has not been registered, please telephone the school at 286-1921.
